MOVABLE HOUSES.

A Dream Which an Imaginative Weiter Calls a Prophecy. In this age, when traveling may be said to be almost a passion, and when so much has been done for the benefit of those who are foud of roaming, it is strange that no system of movable Several of these were called, and re-houses has yet been devised. The lated some of their thrilling experigreat improvements in parior cars gives a hint of how this should be done. Already our millionaires and railroad stentates have their private palaces itted up with every convenience and luxury, in which they might live for weeks at a time, having their cars switched on the sidings at any place where they wish to remain. Two difficulties, however, have yet to be over-come before these cars can be regard-ed as at all satisfactory as places for

Their owners having remained for some time in any city and enjoyed the hospitality of friends, are debarred by the narrowness of their quarters from returning the social kindness of which they have been made the recipi-ents. It is necessary that the parlor car shall be developed until it contains dising rooms, nyslors, dising halls dising rooms, parlors, dising halls, and even ball rooms, suited for the entertainment of large companies. This will probably necessitate the introduc-tion of a wider gauge than is at present commonly employed; unless some arrangements can be made for the use of tracks running upon the double trucks with which roads are already provided. This will naturally come in time, and the people will send out invitations for entertainments to be given in half a dozen cities, on as many different dates, with the comfortable feeling that at the specified time their own houses will be ular intelligence.

The second difficulty with the exist-ing state of things is the fact that cars switched onto a siding are almost sure to be in undesirable parts of the town, whither seif-respecting pleasure-seekers might naturally find it awkward to resort. When once a proper system of house cars has been adopted, the next step will be for the reservation of squares in the fashionable quarter of the town, laid with convenient tracks and switches and hired out for longer or shorter periods to proprietors of traveling mansions. As money has long since ceased to be an object to American millionaires, they will undoubtedly be willing to pay generously for such accommodations, and the general result will be satisfactory scuniary returns to the holders of lots, convenience to the voyaging householders, and a pleasant variety both in the appearance and social life of fashionable neighborhoods. All of fashionable neighborhoods. All this is said, not so much in the way of suggestion, as of prophecy; but since it is well to accustom ourselves to possible innovations, however startling.
